Anna and Tom live isolated in a large forest. He is a writer of books about nature and animal life. She is pregnant, with a child long desired, but has a miscarriage after a fall on the stairs. Her subsequent depression and lurking fear of missing Tom's affection is intensified, when a girl, unknown to them both, and who is an admirer of Tom's writing, comes to live at the same place with her half-tame wolf. Tom becomes fascinated by the girl and her wolf. After a short while, she fetches seven more wolves. While the wolves howl, an uncanny and gloomy atmosphere broods over the place, and the relationship between the three people becomes so tense that it becomes unbearable.
