De forheksede Galoscher.

Professor Buch er en meget lerd Mand, men ogsaa en meget distræt Mand, og navnlig kan han aldrig huske at tage sine Galoscher paa, hvilket volder hans gamle Husholderske adskillige kval-fulde Timer. Vi ser paa Billedet her, hyordan Professor Buch har en saadan Tyche Brahesdag, og hvorledes Skæbnen og nogle drilagtige unge Studenter kan forbitre en Livet, men da Professoren lykkeligt og vel har gennemgaaet alle Argelserne, lover han ogsaa sig selv, at han for sidste Gang har haft et Par Galoscher paa Benene.

AH LES SACRÉS CAOUTCHOUCS.

Le professeur Hubert est un homme très savant, mais aussi un homme très distrait, et spécialement il oublie toujours de mettre ses caoutchoucs au grand désespoir de sa vieille gouvernante qui craint toujours qu'il ne se refroidisse. L'image que nous voyons ici représente un jour particulièrement néfaste à notre professeur et nous montre comment la destinée et quelques jeunes étudiants malicieux peuvent vous rendre la vie dure, mais après ce jour, le professeur se promet que plus jamais il ne mettra des caoutchoucs.

DIE VERHEXTEN GALOSCHEN.

Professor Buch ist ein sehr gelehrter Mann, aber auch ein sehr zerstreuter Mann, und namentlich vergisst er stets, seine Galoschen anzuziehen, was seiner alten Haushälterin manche qualvolle Stunde verursacht. Hier auf dem Bilde sehen wir, wie Herr Professor Buch seinen Pechtag hat, und wie ihm das Schicksal in der Gestalt einiger boshaften Studenten das Leben verbittern kann. Als der Professor jedoch gesund und wohlbehalten aus allen Tierquälereien hervorgegangen ist, gibt er sich selbst das heilige Versprechen, dass es das letzte Mal gewesen sein sollte, wo er die verflixten Galoschen angehabt hat.

ized what was happening. With a cry of "My God, he will wreck the car," he made a frantic grab at the wheel. Too late, for Rasen, with a sudden twist, had sent it crashing into a huge tree at the side of the road. A terrific explosion, then a deathlike stillness. The revenge had been accomplished.

The Bewitched Rubber Shoes.

A laughable comedy of an original nature, being the story of a pair of overshoes belonging to an absent-minded professor.

We are first introduced to the learned Professor Blake standing in a footbath. It is evident that the professor is very absent-minded. He is about to leave for town when his housekeeper appears and insists that he shall put on his overshoes, as it is raining hard outside. During the morning Blake meets a friend, who invites him in to have a drink in a near by pub. The refreshment having been despatched, Blake and his friend set out once more, the former gentleman, however, forgetting one of his overshoes. Later, the professor realises that he is wearing only one shoe. With difficulty he removes the remaining rubber and flings it into a deserted portch. His action is observed by three students, who decide to play a practical joke on him. They bribe an errand boy to run after Blake with the discarded shoe. Annoyed, but undaunted, the old gentleman returns his property to its hiding place and hurriedly takes his departure. But the students do not rest content until they have repeated the joke—not once, but many times. The shoes keep turning up on every possible occasion, and our hero at length decides to buy a new pair, convinced that the old ones are possessed with some evil spirit. After a series of laughable adventures, the professor consigns both pairs to his study fire, declaring that he will no longer be troubled with what he designates "the curse of his life."
